

Greetings, allies of the British secret intelligence service!

I have received information that you have agreed to undertake the most important and dangerous task yet. Our goal is to outpace the Nazis, stop their victorious march, and be the ones to decipher the secret of the Amun-Ra energy. But before I can send you on this top-secret Amun-Ra mission campaign, we need to sort out the formalities. Although we have already worked together several times, you still do not have Agent Status, and we must change this immediately so that we can grant you access to the top-secret information related to this campaign. Therefore, you will have to undergo training under completely realistic conditions, under Nazi encirclement, far from any rescue or safety. We will send you to the French city of Le Arion, occupied by Hitler's army, and know this – this city was not chosen by chance. You will receive information about the course of the training at the Swiss command center, where, as far as I know, one of our resistance members will meet you. Considering the events of recent weeks, the situation there is currently tense, and much remains shrouded in mystery. I can only mention that, given the urgent situation, Mission Commander Simon R. Smith has, at my request, designed this operational agent training outside standard boundaries. Your training will consist of several stages, the purpose of which is to prepare you for undercover work: communication with the enemy, psychological resilience, navigation within the city, movement between districts, the use of secret passages and rapid escape, observation of patrol patterns, sneaking, silent movement and hiding, as well as clue analysis and interpretation, adherence to mission priorities, and team discipline. And yes, as they say – desperate times call for desperate measures, therefore at the end of your training, in order to obtain Agent Status, you will have to complete a real mission. This will serve as your examination, and upon completing it, you will become full-fledged MI6 Secret Service agents, and as confirmation of your new status, right there in Switzerland, you will receive classified information and the right to proceed to the mission campaign “Amun-Ra and the Holy Grail of Ancient Civilizations.”

I wish you success, Chief of the Secret Intelligence Service

Sir Stewart Graham Menzies
